

AMERICANS SEEK TO LEARN PLANS OF JOHNNIE BULL

Ask When Delegation of Great Britain Will Return

BULLETIN
London, July 26—(AP)—The British government will make a statement in the House of Commons regarding the naval negotiations tomorrow or Thursday, Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, told the House today.

Geneva, July 26—(AP)—The American naval delegation sent a letter to the British delegation today asking for information as to when W. C. Bridgman, chief of the British delegation, and Earl Cecil, who are now in London, are expected to return to Geneva to resume the conference.

It appears that Mr. Bridgman informed Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation, before departing for London early last week, that he expected to start back on Sunday last, but since then no word has been received from the British.

In the meantime the delegations have remained expectantly at their desks.

The impression prevails that there may be some division of opinion within the British cabinet and that this is the chief reason for the delay in the return of the British delegates.

Dominions Anxious
An unconfirmed report has been received that some British dominions becoming anxious over a possible rupture, have urged Great Britain not to be apprehensive over details of the American building program on the contention that every-day realizes that war between the United States and Great Britain can be considered as perpetually outlawed.

From all appearances the American delegation is determined not to accept a treaty which it feels would seek to conceal the right to maintain obsolete warships and grant a big toll tonnage without appearing to do so. It is believed that this matter may be arranged by openly giving the signatories authority to keep so many thousand tons of obsolete warcraft for coastal defense and convoy duty until the time comes for their replacement but only until then.

DENY MAKING PROTEST
London, July 26—(AP)—Origin of the statement printed in the Morning Post and Daily Telegraph that Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to the United States, has been instructed to protest against the alleged unfairness of the American press in discussing the British position at the Geneva conference, was somewhat of a mystery today.

Foreign office officials denied that Sir Esme had been instructed to lodge an official protest at Washington. They furthermore stated that in their opinion, the tone of the American press has shown a decided improvement recently and there now seems to be a better understanding of the British position in the United States.

A special meeting of the cabinet was scheduled for this afternoon, but it was certain that the British delegation would return to Geneva in time for a conference meeting tomorrow.

Nicholas, declared the "confessions" referred to Mrs. McPherson's version of her being "kidnapped" a year ago by persons whom she "declares kept her prisoner against her will."

"I and 280 members of our church demanded that she and her mother clear up the kidnapping story," said Mr. Nicholas. "Until she does, the public, which is fickle, will never have full confidence in them again." He insisted there had never been a clear explanation of the "kidnapping case" and that "her name had never been cleared."

CORN BOKER SPREADS

SUBWAY STRIKE IN NEW YORK IS LIKELY THIS EVE

Plans Being Made to Provide Emergency Transportation

New York, July 26—(AP)—With employees and companies still at loggerheads, New York's 2,500,000 daily users of underground and overhead railways prepared today for another midsummer strike.

Officials of the Interborough Rapid and the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Companies continued mustering substitute workers to man trains if members of the Amalgamated Association of Street & Electric Railway Employees, a union the companies have refused to recognize, carry out their threat to strike.

A strike vote, if other scheduled parleys fail, is to be taken at midnight tonight. A strike would, if voted at this meeting, become effective at once, and emergency transportation would provide users of the subways and elevated their chief means of getting to and from work.

Meanwhile, the city continued marshaling its transportation forces to meet a possible tieup.

AVIATION AS AN ADJUNCT TO NAVY IS BEING STUDIED

Use of Planes to Control Fire of Big Guns is Seen

Washington, July 26—(AP)—A vast screen of airplanes for the American fleet, even when battling far from home waters, is the end toward which naval experts are working.

Every fighting ship will carry its quota of planes to supplement those basing on the fleet of aircraft-carriers which will be formed with the coming into commission of the Lexington and Saratoga.

With even the most conservative of old navy men realizing that the first task in the sea battle of the future will be that of clearing the air of enemy planes, experts picture such a clashing of major surface fleets something like this:

With contact established with the enemy there would arise from each American battleship, cruiser, destroyer and submarines, several hundred planes.

Augmenting these would come the combat planes and bombers from the aircraft-carriers, fleet numbering hundreds more. Battle between the opposing air forces would be staged over the tract of sea separating the fleets.

The air force winning victory would ensure victory for its surface fleet unless there was an overwhelming preponderance of numbers against it. These experts declare that without aircraft to spot its shots and correct the fire, a fleet would have little chance against another of any thing like equal strength.

Washington, July 26—(AP)—While the eyes of the world have been fixed on America's trans oceanic liners, naval construction experts have been quietly studying the situation with a view to determining the effect of the spectacular advance of aviation on the future battleship.

The one change upon which there appears a degree of unanimity of opinion in naval circles will result from considering aircraft as an adjunct rather than as an enemy of the battleship. By this, it is meant that the new facility will be used for spotting and correcting the fire of the big guns.

Naval men say this use of the plane in battle time will make for the greatest possible elevation and range of guns as accurate fire can be had at a much greater distance than probably even was dreamed of before the plane came into use for fire control.

Another question on which a large number of American naval men seem to agree is against the combination battleship and airplane carrier. It will be more than three years before the next American battleship is designed as no more craft of this type can be built by the United States, Great Britain and Japan until 1931.

ENTERTAINMENTS AT CHAUTAUQUA OF HIGHEST CLASS

First Day's Audiences Well Pleased With the Programs

PROGRAM

TONIGHT
7:45 p. m.—Concert, The Apollo Choir.
8:45 p. m.—Lecture, "The Biography of a Boy," Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes.
WEDNESDAY
2:30 p. m.—Concert, The Apollo Choir.
7:45 p. m.—Evening Comedy, "Aunt Carrie Comes to Town," The Playcraft Company.

Despite the showers of Monday evening the attendance at the first night's entertainment of the Dixon Independent Chautauqua at Assembly Park was very satisfactory, and the class of entertainment provided by the Mason Jubilee Singers and Tom Corwin was excellent.

Each of these attractions proved its worth and the audience was delighted while the patronage was encouraging to the promoters, who see signs of sufficient interest to continue holding an annual chautauqua in this city.

Good Program Today

An outstanding program of the week is arranged for this afternoon and this evening, the Apollo Choir giving concerts at both sessions, and the day climaxing in the lecture on "The Biography of a Boy" by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, one of America's foremost pulpit orators. Bishop Hughes has countless admirers and friends in this section and doubtless he will draw a large audience this evening.

Singer Known Here

Frank Bennett, baritone who heads the "Apollo Choir" at the Chautauqua is the program director of the Chicago Radio show and soloist and director of the Chicago Concert Company.

All the members of this company have been heard individually and in groups over nearly all the Chicago radio stations.

On July 14th and 15th Mr. Bennett took part in the Lincoln Golf Tournament at Polo, representing the Morrison Country club.

In the evening when the club assembled for dinner Mr. Bennett gave several vocal numbers which were enthusiastically received.

"Aunt Carrie Comes to Town" will, no doubt prove one of the best comedies ever given on the chautauqua platform. It is a story of American home life. The family live in a small western town, happy, contented and comfortably situated financially. Unexpected and sudden wealth causes the husband to decide that he is a "big city" man and over the protests of Aunt Carrie and his family they move to New York City. Here they learn the inevitable lesson that money cannot buy happiness and friends, unspoiled housewife. The humorous situations in which they find themselves in the large city keeps the audience in an uproar of laughter. Finally they return to their old home, where again they find neighbors and friends and happiness.

The play has a great moral, but is so full of comedy that one does not realize its purpose until the close of the play. Then one becomes aware of the fact that one has not only been entertained and made to laugh, but has learned a great truth. It is an ideal chautauqua play.

Pete Reilly, Delaney's manager, announced the fighter's action which, he added, paved the way for Delaney to fight Paulino Lucumun, Spanish heavyweight, on August 11. Mike McTigue, who was to have fought Delaney August 11 for the light heavyweight title, will be recognized as the "leading contender" and given title recognition if he defeats some "worthy opponent," this summer, according to Reilly and Jimmy Johnston, McTigue's manager.

NUMEROUS RADIO STATIONS FACING LOSS OF PERMITS

Federal Commission to Punish Violators of New Rulings

Washington, July 26—(AP)—A heavy mortality among radio broadcasting stations after August 15 was predicted today by the Federal Radio Commission. Commissioners have decided that the elimination of a considerable number of broadcasters is going to be automatically brought about by conditions which they have had under observation for several weeks.

"On June 15, the commission outlined a new allocation of broadcasting waves," Commissioner Bellows explained. "Since that date the operations of all stations have been under check. A very large number of the stations have not been holding to their proper wave length."

"During the first few weeks it was the commission's disposition to be patient."

Notifications Aug. 1.
"However, the commission has decided to begin notifying broadcasters on Aug. 1, when their stations are off the proper waves and if such stations have not corrected the departure by Aug. 15, we shall refuse to renew the station's license."

"I believe that a considerable number of stations are going to be caught by the new policy. Our reports indicate that a considerable group of even the largest stations have been off their wave length."

"With the commission renews its license August 15, it will be only for a sixty day period."
"The places of the stations that may be dropped will not be filled by new stations. The reduction in the number of broadcasting stations will all operate to improve radio service and reduce congestion and interference."

POLITICAL UNITY FOR RUMANIA IS NOW APPARENT

Leader of Opposition to New King Makes Reconciliation

Bucharest, July 26—(AP)—Rumanian political unity around the child king was virtually achieved when the former opposition leader, General Averescu, publicly embraced Premier Bratiano and recognized the authority of the regency last night.

Averescu, who has been a bitter opponent of Bratiano and hostile to King Ferdinand, made his political reconciliation all the more emphatic by staging it in the presence of the full senate.

Bratiano, who has been strongly opposed to the return to Rumania of former Crown Prince Carol, succeeded Averescu as premier in June.

With the establishment of a regency all countries will be obligated to re-accredit their diplomatic representatives to the new king. This is without precedent in Europe in recent times, the only analogous case being in Spain during the minority of Alfonso.

CAROL PLANS NOTHING

Paris, July 26—(AP)—Further assurance that former Crown Prince Carol would undertake no action likely to create difficulties for the government of Rumania, "as lawfully constituted by the wish of his father," was given to the Petit Parisien by Professor Nicolae, of Bucharest University, one of a group of Rumanians who called on Carol at his villa yesterday.

"His Highness however," said the professor "is very bitter at not having been allowed to return to his country to salute the King's remains. He is also surprised at the comments of certain newspapers which tend to represent him as leading a life of dissipation, whereas he rarely goes out and spends the greater part of his time in reading."

PAID DOCTORS' BILLS

Bucharest, July 26—(AP)—One of King Ferdinand's last acts was to insist on paying his own doctor's bills, totaling about 600,000 francs (about $20,000 at present exchange) which the state was about to pay.

"There's been enough trouble to the state," he said.

Bestows Half Inheritance on His Bride

La Tuque, Quebec, July 26—(AP)—La Tuque was early astir today, the wedding day of Lena Wilson, the 18 year old daughter of humble parents who by her engagement to "Bud" Stillman, has become the town's most famous resident.

Thirty miles away at Grand Anse everything was in readiness for the ceremony.

While waiting for the trucks to carry them to Grand Anse to play in competition with native violin and accordion players, hundreds of members of the Royal Highlanders' band paraded the streets.

Grand Anse, Quebec, July 26—(AP)—Villagers and woodland folk trekked here today for the entry of Lena Wilson, daughter of the woods, into the Stillman family of New York as the bride of "Bud" Stillman.

Father Lamy assisted by three other Roman Catholic priests was selected to perform the outdoor ceremony.

Supplies sufficient to provide refreshment for four days were trucked the 30 miles from La Tuque. Many gallons of wine, beer and other beverages were included for the big party.

As the hour for the wedding approached, all rumors of family strife had vanished. Lena went down to La Tuque yesterday to bid farewell to the home where her mother and six sisters have been living since fall.

"Bud" plans to take his bride to Paris and perhaps Scotland, the native land of her father on their honeymoon. Later they expect to go to New York where the bridegroom is to begin his preparation for a medical career.

Sunshine Class Held Enjoyable Picnic

Thursday afternoon, despite the threatening weather, members and friends of the Sunshine Class, St. Paul's Lutheran S. S. went in autos from Dixon to Wauwau to the home of Sam Brimblecomb, where Mrs. Mae Perkins delightfully entertained them.

After the baskets of food were received, and a chat in the parlors, there was an impromptu program of readings by Mrs. Martha Shippert and Miss Mabel Kay, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Wiley Shippert, accompanied by Mrs. Welsh. Hearing the call of motherless lambs at a fence nearby, all went to see the feeding of these pretty orphans. Then soon, in another part of the lawn, Mrs. Wm. Missman and Mrs. Malarkey arranged the children and the grown-ups in a group for the camera.

Mrs. Lengel began gathering the children together for games. But older people, too, were in a mood for the fun and quickly enlarged the circle. It had a merry time with games old and new.

When the baskets were opened a beautiful and delicious feast was spread, and the guests took their well-filled plates out to the lawn in the late afternoon sunshine. Then, after the ice cream and cake, the happy company, numbering about thirty-five, began filling the autos for home.

Tells More About Mystic Worker Picnic

(Contributed)

The largest picnic ever held in the history of Dixon lodge No. 27 Mystic Workers was staged at Lowell Park Sunday when between three hundred and fifty and four hundred Mystics and friends from all over the state gathered in the north end of the park to enjoy a picnic dinner, and program which had been prepared by the committee. The day was ideal for such a gathering and the park was never prettier, and as President Bentley said one of the finest picnic grounds he ever saw.

About 11:30 a caravan from Fulton, consisting of the employees and their families from the Home Office, and the Juvenile Drill team from Fulton lodge, all the guests of President Bentley, drove into the park, and were welcomed by the Dixon members. These visiting members were then served with a two-course picnic dinner, which had been prepared under the direction of the chairman of the refreshment committee, Mrs. Bert Carr, who with her able assistants served the guests to the satisfaction of everyone present. There were 115 seated at one long table, which extended between the beautiful trees, this table being decorated by the chairman of the table decorating committee, Mrs. J. W. Busby, with linen tablecloths, purple and gold streamers, with a centerpiece of flags, and a profusion of bouquets, and with the bountiful layout of provisions certainly presented a pleasing picture to the eyes of the visiting Mystics.

which was enjoyed by all. Directors Riordon of Morrison, and Richoff of Lyons, Iowa, gave short talks, and Mrs. Cummings, Supt. of the Fulton Juvenile lodge also gave a few remarks which were well received. The address of the afternoon was given by President Bentley on the subject of Fraternism, and certainly held those present spellbound in one of the most masterful addresses ever given here. But before Mr. Bentley spoke, Charles Stapes of Rock Falls lodge had wandered down to the beach and returned bringing the members of the West Brooklyn band who gave several numbers which were thoroughly enjoyed. The last speaker of the afternoon was Secretary Frank W. Howe who delivered a short address. George W. Howe the Society's first presiding officer was also called upon, and proved to be equal to the occasion in one of his splendid talks. Everyone knows Daddy Howe, and he and his good wife are held in high esteem by the Mystics everywhere.

Dorsey Lightner had charge of the sports, which were of interest to the Juveniles and the grown ups as well. There were many races the winners receiving cash prizes.

After the races a cafeteria luncheon was served to all present. The Mystics lingered at the picnic grounds until nearly dark when they departed for their homes.

HARVEST TIME.

There used to be two American holidays dedicated primarily to the consumption of more food than was good for the human digestive machinery. One of those holidays—Thanksgiving—was and still is primarily a city feast day. It has been fixed on the calendar, and from its earliest times it has been associated with the gathering of people in towns.

The other of these holidays is a seasonal affair which wanders about the calendar during summer months, depending on weather and location. It is a rural orgy with which many city-fied pictures are unfortunately unfamiliar. The feast, as the farm-wife have surmised, is the dinner set for the harvest hands when threshing time comes round.

For the smaller wheat belt farms, threshing time is the biggest holiday of the year, though, it is a day on which all hands work their hardest. The threshing machine men, move their awe-inspiring, cumbersome, puffing, iron monster by night. For two and three days before they pull into each farm, the farmwives are preparing the feast. Young roosters give up the ghost like pilgrims in the path of a Moslem horde. The garden, at harvest time, is always at its maximum productivity. Roasting ears, new peas, new potatoes, new beets, new carrots, new beans—lima beans, pole beans, string beans, and beans in succotash. Jelly and jam of every flavor. Pickles. Cakes by the dozen and pies by the score. First table, second table, third table. Good women from the neighboring farms wash dishes after the first feeding in order to provide equipment for later details. Sweating men wash the chaff and grime from their faces and ears and arms and elbows in big tubs out under the sycamore tree. Then they sit down to eat enough fried chicken and trimmin's to lay up less hardy beings with acute indigestion for several days.

It was an orgy for men folks, but it was a woman's day, too, for the reputation of any farm wife in her community was made or broken on the repast she set for the harvest hands at threshing time. Pride went into each loaf of bread, each glass of jelly, and each pie, and women stood behind the chairs of the reticent to urge greater gastronomical achievement.

East of the Mississippi the day will remain much the same for several generations at least, but from the big wheat farms of the west comes news that the day is changing. The combination harvester-thresher, which eliminates much threshing and saves much time has reduced the demand for many extra laborers. And the paid secretary of the Hutchinson, Kas., Chamber of Commerce boasts that the wives of the wheat farms drove to town in their automobiles this harvest time and bought 6000 loaves of baker's bread.

In a few more years, harvest hands may be fed grub that comes in cans, and the harvest feast will lose its sacredness.

KEEPING UP WITH THE NEIGHBORS.

Once upon a time there were two neighboring families who went under the well known names of Smith and Jones. They had been young folks together, and were distantly related. They had had a few family feuds, but they got along well together on the whole, and had prospered.

When automobiles came in, each family had its automobile. When it became stylish to have two automobiles, the Smiths were not far behind the Joneses. When it became stylish to have three automobiles the Joneses were not far behind the Smiths. One day the Smiths took a notion into their heads that they should have more automobiles than the Joneses. They bought a car for each of the children, and one for each of their servants.

The Joneses said that this was the height of extravagance and foolishness, but what could they do? The two families had been equally leaders in the community for years, and the Joneses could not afford to fall behind. So they, too, ordered cars for all their servants.

This pretty little allegory of everyday life has its parallel in international nonsense. Call the Smiths England and call the Joneses America, use the word cruiser in place of the word automobile, and you have the whole story of the disarmament conference impasse and deadlock.

Reduced to simplest terms, it becomes an absurdity.

When the next Congress assembles something ought to be done about the man who goes around slapping sunburned shoulders.

A town in New Jersey has banned auto driving on Sunday. In other communities the drivers take care of that themselves.

New York poultrymen have been advised to feed hens wet mash to stimulate production. But how about the eighteenth amendment?

With more than 100 days set aside for such special observances as swatting flies, eating apples, stepping on cockroaches, buying insurance, having your brakes rmelined and whatnot, a man really should spend all his Sundays studying his schedule for the week.

In one New York town they barred a hot dog stand on the ground that "small boys do not know what is good for them." Reading about wars, divorces, murders, gang wars, mortgages and gall stones, we're beginning to think some of the large boys don't, either.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The Tinies got a real thrill when they hopped upon the chocolate hen. Away the clucking brown bird went, like lightning, down the road. Now this was surely something new. The queer bird seemed to like it, too, for she was very careful that she didn't spill her load.

Said Clucky Tiny, "By heck, I'm hanging tightly to her neck. I hope her feathers don't come out. 'Twould spill me on the ground. The rest of you just cling to me and we'll be safe as we can be. We certainly should all be glad that this fine bird was found."

Then Coppy, with a spreading grin, with squeaky voice, then chimed right in. "She surely is a baky hen, and knows a lot of tricks. I really think 'twould suit me best if she would take us to her nest. Say, if she does, perhaps we'll find a lot of chocolate chicks."

But Clucky Hen had no such plan. For miles and miles she ran, and then she reached a little stream

SAINT and SINNER

Whether it was the brown pallor of Bob's face or the irritable boredom in his eyes that decided her Faith did not consciously know, but at Sunday breakfast she made an announcement, as unexpected to herself as to her father, sister and husband.

"Bob and I are going picnicking today—just the two of us. Tures in good condition, darling?" She turned bright, apparently untrobbled eyes upon her husband.

She was rewarded with a brightening of Bob's dull blue eyes—eyes that had once been brilliant as blue diamonds. "The car's in splendid shape. When can you be ready?"

"Oh, Faith, can't I go?" Cherry wailed, her face puckering to tears like an aggrieved child's. "Let's all go."

"No," Faith laughed, but her voice was firm. "We couldn't take the baby. And Dad hates picnics. He'd rather stay at home and read his paper. But he shan't have a lonely dinner. This is going to be a picnic for two, honey. Don't sulk, Cherry."

Bob looked five years younger even before they had started. He had insisted on supervising the packing of the luncheon hamper, instructing his wife and Mrs. Lundy in the preparation of the sandwiches and salads that he liked best.

"You got enough grub here to feed a Sunday school picnic crowd," Mrs. Lundy growled, but she was excited and pleased. She said to Faith: "Honey him up a little today, Mm' Hathaway. You forget all about this house and the family and the baby and act like you was his sweetheart again."

And so Faith was thinking of herself as Bob's sweetheart when the dark blue sedan rolled out of the graveled driveway into Serenity Boulevard. She would not let herself feel even a little sorry for Cherry, wistfully waving goodbye from the front porch, the baby held awkwardly in the crook of her right arm.

Bob, minus hat and coat, drove with the wind rushing through the crisp chestnut waves of his thick hair. His brown arms, bare to the elbow, and the bronzed column of his throat, released by the turning in of the collar of his white madras shirt, made him look like a carefree college boy, off on a joy ride with his girl. And the smile which he flashed at her from time to time, when his attention could be diverted from his driving, was the smile of a happy youth. His eyes were bluer and brighter than the cloudless skies.

Faith's heart sang with joy. She threw back her head, and let him see the soft shining of her brown eyes, the flush on her ivory-white cheeks, the little half-smile that twitched at the corner of her beautiful broad mouth. She looked like a girl in love, shyly expecting her beloved's first kiss. She was almost afraid to talk, lest her words should remind him that they were married—five months married—and burdened with the responsibilities of a home and a family.

Bob seemed to read her thoughts, and to be intent upon matching her mood—her sweetheart mood. "Do you know that you're beautiful, darling?" he asked in a low, caressing voice, when he had brought the car to a stop before a traffic signal.

And Faith, blushing brightly, touched his hand upon the wheel with just the tips of her fingers, withdrawing them, with a shy murmur of laughter, before he could seize them. Oh, he was to be hers—her lover—for a day, before Cherry, working for him daily as his secretary, had a chance to win him away from her!

SUPPLY OF HOGS IN STATE IS SOME BIGGER FOR YEAR

Small Corn Crop May Dis- courage Pork Pro- duction in '28

Springfield—(AP)—The hog supply available for Illinois and the United States is slightly larger than during the last year, according to a joint report today by the federal and state departments of agriculture. The report continued:

"Indications are that the demand for pork products will continue about as at present. If this year's corn crop proves to be as small as present conditions indicate, the situation will doubtless tend to discourage hog production next year. Hog producers should remember, however, that the corn crop next year will very probably be larger than this year's crop and that a production of hogs for the country as a whole about equal to that of the past three years seems to promise the best returns to the producers of both corn and hogs."

"The number of hogs on farms in the United States July 1, 1927, that normally would be marketed during the four months, July to October, was probably about the same as on July 1 of a year ago. The actual marketings and slaughter of hogs, however, during these four months will be influenced to a considerable extent by the developments in the corn crop situation in the corn belt states. If the corn crop prospects do not improve from those indicated by condition July 1, and a short crop of poor quality becomes increasingly more probable, a larger marketing of hogs during the four months can be expected than if the crop outlook should improve materially and corn prices decline somewhat. But whether the four months supply is larger or smaller than last year, all indications point to a larger proportion of thin, grassy packing sows and a smaller proportion of finished butcher hogs. If the corn situation continues unfavorable, a heavy run of light spring pigs in the latter part of September and in October may be expected."

"If no unusual death losses from cholera, such as occurred last fall, are experienced this year, an increase of from 1-2 to 2 million head in the inspected slaughter next winter and spring over last would seem probable. This would be an increase of around 6 to 8 per cent. If the present unfavorable corn-hog price ratio continues and the supply of corn is as small as indicated July 1, farmers will be inclined to market their hogs early at light weights and the total weight of hogs slaughtered may be less the coming winter and spring than last."

"The domestic demand for hog products during the first half of 1927 in the United States was little different from that prevailing during the first half of 1926. It seems unlikely that any material reduction in the domestic demand for hog products will take place during the next twelve months. There is practically no indication of any improvement in the foreign demand for American pork products, during the next twelve months.

"The outstanding factor causing the decline in prices which started last February was decreased foreign demand for American pork, caused both by a decrease in actual European demand and a material increase in European supplies. Contributing factors were somewhat increased total hog supplies with an unusually large proportion coming after the close of the winter packing season, a slightly lower general wholesale price level of all commodities, low hard prices caused principally by the large supply and low price of cottonseed oil and apparently a decreased demand in the South for cured pork."

"The low level to which hog prices declined, however, apparently more than discounted the unfavorable aspects in the situation, hence with the summer supply of hogs as indicated, conditions are favorable for a more than usual advance in prices during August and September. The present united efforts to move storage stocks through publicity and lower retail prices and the continued high level of beef prices also favor higher prices for hogs. In view of the expected supply of grassy, unfinished hogs the advance this summer will doubtless be confined more than usual to well finished, medium and light weight or butcher hogs."

"If the small corn crop as indicated from present conditions materializes heavy marketings of light unfinished hogs may be expected into the late fall and early winter and a seasonal price decline in November and December somewhat larger than usual my result, probably reaching a level not greatly different from that of mid-July. As the winter advanced higher prices seem probable with a more than usual seasonal rise in the later winter and spring."

Visible Supply of Grain in the Land

New York, July 26—(AP)—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels. Wheat, increased 1,304,000. Corn, decreased 1,279,000. Oats, decreased 2,337,000. Rye, decreased 62,000. Barley, increased 13,000.

It will be of interest to many of the readers of The Telegraph to know that the finest chickens served on all the Cunard steamships are furnished by the Dixon Packing Co. of Dixon.

WEEKLY SURVEY OF AGRICULTURE IN STATE GIVEN

Prairie Farmer Reviews Conditions on Farms of Illinois

Chicago, Ill.—(AP)—Cattle prices had a further advance during the past week as a result of the extremely light run since mid-June, according to Prairie Farmer's weekly agriculture survey. Choice heavy steers at Chicago reached a new top of $14.50 with long yearlings at $13.65 and light yearlings at $13.25. Choice grain fed cows and heifers and sausage bulls returned to the year's high point. Even grassy cattle recovered most of the June break, the review continued. "The good prices proved a magnet that drew in a heavy run of fed cattle as well as grassy kinds. Receipts at leading markets increased and prices were forced to yields. In the past four weeks receipts of cattle at seven leading markets have averaged about 145,000 head per week. By September they will probably exceed 300,000 head."

"Scarcity of choice light hogs has pushed top prices on the Chicago market to $10.65, the highest prices since early in May. This compares with $9 on the low day in June. Average prices have not gained proportionately, owing to the fact that average quality is considerably poorer, than it was a month or two ago. The upturn is the largest since the downward trend set in last winter. While hog receipts have fallen off sharply they are still in excess of the corresponding time last year. The United States Department of agriculture reports that receipts will be about the same as last year.

"Increased receipts have cut lamb prices. Since receipts are due to increase materially and since prices are relatively high it is logical to expect that the market will work lower."

"Manufacturers are buying and as a result the wool trade has broadened. The tendency of prices is upward. Common crossbred wools are selling at 35 cents. Holding of combing and clothing wool at Boston is 60 per cent less than a year ago."

"An unexpectedly high forecast of the domestic wheat crop and failure of rust damage to appear in spring wheat in the United States and Canada caused sharp break in wheat prices in the last few days. Sluggish export demand in the face of the new crop movement was a contributing factor. The official forecast showed 579 million bushels of winter wheat and 274 million bushels of spring wheat, or a total of 854 million bushels, compared with $32 million bushels harvested last year and a five year average of 808 million bushels. A few weeks ago the reports were that the crop would be 30 to 40 million bushels less than last year."

"The official forecast on the corn crop was 2,274,000,000 bushels, which would be the smallest yield since 1903. It is 371 million bushels under last year's harvest and 492 million bushels below the five year average. The cash corn situation has been strengthened to some extent. Primary receipts are smaller than a month ago. Ultimately, higher prices are probable, but they may not occur until some new crop damage appears, or until they are forced by a greater degree of commercial scarcity."

"The oats forecast was 1,349,000,000 bushels against 1,254,000,000 last year. With this in view there is no reason to anticipate higher prices for oats. A large barley crop is in prospect. A large crop of sweet clover seed will be harvested, according to advance reports."

The egg market has strengthened due to the decline in production which has been accentuated by the hot weather. Prices have advanced as the supply of fresh eggs has fallen off. Holdings of storage eggs on July 1 exceeded 1926.

Valuable Hints for Farmers and Their Good Wives

Milk and cream not only should be kept cold until leaving the farm, but also should be protected from the sun and warm air while being transported from the farm to the city.

Milk stands at the roadside should be shaded, and cans of milk and cream hauled in trucks or wagons should be covered with a canvas. If this is not done much careful work in producing the milk may be wasted. Heavy jackets for milk cans add materially in keeping the contents cold.

During the work season the farm work horse should be fed only at regular intervals. Concentrated feed is necessary to supply the energy for hard work. It is not advisable to feed large amounts of roughages at this season except during periods of rest. Excessive feeding of hay is expensive, reduces the efficiency of the horse and often causes respiratory disorders.

New York terminal costs for a sack of Michigan potatoes covering a terminal movement of about 15 miles are greater than for the entire road haul of more than 1,000 miles. Trucking is the chief element in the cost of terminal hauling.

No way is known of increasing permanently the percentage of butterfat in cows' milk. Feeding the proper amounts of a good balanced ration will bring out the maximum milk flow and consequently the maximum amount of butterfat. The percentage of butterfat, however, is an inherent trait in individual animals and is fairly constant.

Generally bunch grasses cannot withstand as close grazing as the graminas and true turf-forming grasses and still maintain their stand.

A ton of leaves or "needles" per acre containing valuable fertilizing elements fits to the ground each year in red and Jack pine forests.

The needles contain many substances essential for plant growth. Analysis of materials given back to the soil by the forest reveals that each year the needles falling on one acre contained 9 to 15 pounds of nitrogen, or ammonia, 7 to 15 pounds of calcium, 2 to 3 pounds of phosphoric acid, about 3 pounds of potash and 5 pounds of sulphur.

Discord in Farmers

Circles Not Serious

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 25—(AP)—Because the farmers are not united as to an agricultural remedy, the inference has been drawn that all is well with agriculture and no remedy is needed. Governor McMillen of Nebraska, declared at the 19th annual Governors' Conference here today.

History shows that no major national policy ever has been adopted that has had the unanimous support of the groups concerned he said. Yet all such legislation has been found beneficial and effective, Governor McMillen declared.

"With such historic precedents it should not seem strange if six million farmers in their economic views, the governor said. 'Yet it may be said that farmers and farm organizations are far more nearly in accord on the agricultural legislation that they have supported in recent years than generally has been the case with other important acts of government.'"

Major J. Russell King, London representative of the Australian Dairy Produce Board, has recently been a guest of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. He is in this country to study American distribution methods.

There were 47 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dunn & Co., compared with 354 during the corresponding week last year.

When a Man Loves

By ALLIE LOWE MILES

John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture adaptation of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, a good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood, but meets and loves Marion Lescot, a beautiful orphan being taken to a convent by her rascally brother, who doesn't want to be bothered with her. Marion's brother, seeing Fabien, a rich connoisseur of women, smitten with her, realizes her worldly value and sells her to Raviot. But Fabien elopes with her to Paris, where they wander into a boarding house and are put into the same room. Fabien goes out to buy food. Returning, he finds Marion has innocently undressed and gone to bed. He is tempted.

Exhausted from the strain of this first fight with himself, Fabien sank into the big chair by the window and buried his burning head in his hands.
The storm outside became more furious. A blinding flash of lightning lit up the room. Fabien did not move.
A resounding clap of thunder awakened Marion, and with a terrified start she sat up in bed and looked wildly about. Sleep had been so sound and the awakening so sudden that she did not realize where she was. But when a second zig-zag of lightning opened the heavens and filled the room with light she saw Fabien and rushed over to him without a moment's thought or hesitation. Like a terrified child she threw herself into his arms and cuddled close—her face hidden against his shoulder to shut out the terrifying storm.
Fabien's face was white and strained. Just when he had about conquered himself it was difficult to have Marion precipitate herself so appealingly into his lap. He tried to pat her shoulder reassuringly, but a still more vivid flash of lightning seemed to set the room on fire and Marion's arms went tightly around Fabien's neck as she clung to him in terror.

Surely this was a strange answer to Fabien's prayer. No possible power could help him fight his passion any longer. With a cry of happy relief, his arms went about Marion and strained her to him. He kissed her neck—the first kiss he had ever given a woman. He buried his head in her shoulder and kissed her again and again.
Marion looked at him bewilderingly. His eyes tried to convey their passion. He bent reverently and touched her lips. In a moment he was holding her tighter and kissing her wildly. Marion was no longer frightened. Her beautiful eyes filled with flaming love and adoration were at the same time dreamy and elusive. Fabien again held her close and kissed her madly.
The little candle on the table flickered in its stem, sputtered and went out.

CHAPTER VI
Love, Youth and Poverty
A company of three, Marion, Fabien and poverty, lived happily together in the little attic room. They were concerned only with their great love and meagre wants. Their project of marriage was forgotten. They innocently defrauded the church of her rights and found themselves united as man and wife without thought or fear of consequences.
So absorbed was Fabien in his passion that he gave little thought to his family. He never dreamed of the distress that his mysterious absence was causing his father. Not for a moment did he doubt Marion's power to captivate and bewitch. Back of it all was the idea of obtaining his father's consent to their marriage, and Fabien explained to Marion that aside from filial duty and love it would be wise because his father had unlimited means, and their slim finances were already sadly reduced with no available means of replenishing them.
For the time being, however, life was too sweet to mar it by the

British Flier Waiting Favorable Weather Now

Southampton, July 25.—The readjusted wireless apparatus in Captain F. T. Courtney's flying boat "Whale" in which the British aviator plans to fly to New York, got its first real test today when he took the plane up from Calshot.
It is stated that there is nothing now remaining to delay the flight as soon as the weather reports are favorable.

VERA CAMERON, the most efficient private secretary in the whole Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company, is made assistant to the new advertising manager, JERRY MACKLYN.

When Vera presents herself to Macklyn, he surveys her a bit critically and asks her to write a report of her experiences with the company's cosmetics. To her can learn something about the products, and she is forced to admit that she has, chastely restrained from anything but cleansing cream and powder.

Macklyn, amazed, has an inspiration. He tells her he will transform her into a beauty with the aid of Peach Bloom cosmetics. Photograph her in every stage of the transformation and use her picture in the advertising. Vera is furious and leaves his office, determined to resign. In the elevator she sees a man with whom she falls instantly in love. She hears him called SCHUYLER and learns he is going to Minnetonka lake in June. She returns to Jerry, determined to undergo the transformation, to become beautiful and to take her own vacation in June at Lake Minnetonka.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV

"HELLO! Back from lunch already? I was just going out for a bite myself." Jerry Macklyn burst out of his office and almost upset Vera Cameron.

"I was—" Vera began to stammer in the incredible relief that poured over her tortured nerves. "Oh, Mr. Macklyn, I'm sorry I flew out of the office in such a temper. It isn't like me, really it isn't. Won't you—won't you please forgive me?"

Jerry Macklyn stared at her a moment uncomprehendingly, then burst into a roar of genuine amusement. "Forgive you? Sure! I guess I wasn't very tactful. You see, I know what I want and I set out to get it, and sometimes I don't spend enough time on my approach, as the psychology sharks put it. But I knew you'd be back—knew you'd change your mind soon as you had time to think it over. It's a swell idea, isn't it? I've been going over the ads Peach Bloom is putting out, and they're lousy! Far as I can see, there's not a reason in the world why any woman should buy Peach Bloom instead of any other line of cosmetics—from the ads, I mean. Got to make them think we've got magic to sell—"

"I hope we have!" Vera cried, in a voice so poignant with need that Jerry Macklyn's eyebrows shot up his forehead.

"What made you change your mind?" he demanded.

Vera's pale face flamed with color. "I—I want to be—a help to you—" she began painfully, her hands twisting together.

"Oh, come clean, child!" Jerry Macklyn laughed at her. "I said if this Peach Bloom stuff is any good, or one-tenth as good as the company claims it is, that I could make you into a beauty. And you want to be a beauty. That's it, isn't it? Sure it is! You're human, even if you do wear Y. W. C. A. shoes and long skirts. Say, what's the matter with your legs, anyway?" he asked anxiously. "I know they aren't skinny from the sample you show," and he cocked his flaming red head at the modest six inches of well-shaped calf that her unfashionably long skirt revealed.

"Mr. Macklyn!" Vera cried, stung to tears.

"Now, don't say, 'How dare you, sir!'" Jerry chuckled.

He grinned at her with such ingratiating boyishness as he thrust out a hand that she capitulated suddenly, gave him her hand, smiled at him, her rare, wide, sweet smile.

"What a lovely face you have!" he murmured.

"I can see perfectly without but, I had headaches for a month two years ago and the oculist prescribed glasses—" she began, closing her eyes for a moment to accustom them to the light, which the amber tint in the lenses minimized and changed. Then she opened her eyes wide and faced Jerry Macklyn.

"Judas Priest!" that amazing young man ejaculated fervently. "Why in the name of all that's holy didn't you tell me you had green eyes!"

She drew a deep, quivering breath, spread her hands in a gesture of surrender. "I'll do anything you say, if you'll—keep your word and make a—beauty of me."

"Good girl!" he applauded. "I can't guarantee results. That's largely up to Peach Bloom cosmetics, but I've got a whole bag of tricks besides the beauty treatments. Clothes, carriage, manner, psychology—oh, girl dear, I can make you so different your own mother wouldn't know you! Now—take down your hat! Remember—you said you'd do anything I told you!"

Her hands trembled as she drew the hairpins out of the flat braids that encircled her head twice. They fell below her waist, those braids, and she was proud of their extraordinary length.

"Unbraid it!" he commanded her. "I want to get an idea of the real color and the texture of it. Here, I'll help you!"

"Pretty stuff, hanging like that!" Jerry Macklyn said to her. "But a girl can't go around using her hair for a cape, and when it's all bundled up on her head it's just so much excess baggage. Now, off with the goggles! Can you see without them?" And he lifted the horns bows of her spectacles from her ears.

"When!" Jerry Macklyn whistled. "Some smile! Take off your hat."

that showed her perfect teeth and made her mouth an adorable and almost irresistible invitation.

"Whew!" Jerry Macklyn whistled, his whole face lighting up with amazement and pleasure. "Some smile! Those lips! Those teeth! That nose! Say, this isn't going to be half the job I thought it was! Take off your hat!" he commanded.

She lifted off her hat, and at a gesture from him followed him into his private office. He grinned at her over his shoulder as he turned the key in the lock.

"I'm not taking any chances on being interrupted for a few minutes," he chuckled, then his face went blank as he saw her face grow rigid with fear and distaste. "Say, Miss Cameron, what do you think I'm going to try to do? Get fresh with you? Judas Priest!" The fervor with which he uttered his favorite exclamation made her illogically angry, a fact which he refused to comment on. "You can trust me, Miss Cameron! I'll swear by all the prophets and sign a contract to that effect if you want me to, but for heaven's sake don't keep slowing up the works. Now—do as I tell you to, or the whole show's off. What say?"

She drew a deep, quivering breath, spread her hands in a gesture of surrender. "I'll do anything you say, if you'll—keep your word and make a—beauty of me."

"Judas Priest!" that amazing young man ejaculated fervently. "Why in the name of all that's holy didn't you tell me you had green eyes!"

She drew a deep, quivering breath, spread her hands in a gesture of surrender. "I'll do anything you say, if you'll—keep your word and make a—beauty of me."

"Why should I have told you that I had green eyes?" Vera retorted angrily. "I can't help it if they're green—"

"Help it! Why, Judas Priest, child, you should be thanking God every night on your knees for those eyes of yours! Green! As green and clear and sparkling as sea water! A pair of emeralds set in your eyes and you trot out to an oculist and pay him good, hard cash to cover them up for you with yellow glass! Oh, my sainted aunt! If I were a girl what I could do with a pair of eyes like those!"

"What would you do with them?" "Oh, I'll teach you, never you fear!" Jerry Macklyn's laugh rang out. "Here! Let me get an idea of what shape your head is under that cloak of hair!"

She stood quite still while he strained the heavy masses of her mousey brown hair back from her forehead and confined it tightly at the nape of her neck with his encircling hands.

"An aristocratic head, by golly!" he exclaimed.

"I'm—glad—I'm not so hopeless," Vera quivered happily.

"Now for the bad news," Jerry Macklyn said briskly. "Eyebrows all wrong—thick and straight, and almost meeting in the middle; eyelashes not long enough or thick enough. Guess you batted the life out of the poor things against those goggles of yours—"

"I can't go without glasses," Vera cried. "The oculist said I couldn't."

"Here, let me have a look at those glasses! And then I'll squirt a bit into your eyes—"

"What do you know about eyes and glasses?"

"Me? Why, I wrote advertising copy for the National Optometrists' Association," he chuckled at her. "And I always study the line I'm in. These glasses are for nothing but a very slight farsightedness and the most minor astigmatism. Not enough to give you any real trouble. Nobody's eyes are absolutely perfect. Throw 'em away!"

Joy and resentment battled for a moment in Vera's completely upset mind, then joy won and she smiled at him again, brilliantly. "Go ahead! Complete the inventory! What else is wrong with this picture?"

"Freckles!" he said, with exaggerated sternness to cover his own confusion. "And no color. And your skin is too dry, young woman! I'll bet you've been washing your face!"

Tunney and Dempsey Defendants in Court Actions

Chicago, July 26—(AP)—Storms may be brewing in the east over the coming Dempsey-Tunney fight for the heavyweight title, but in Chicago all is fair.

The official chorus of Chicago's welcome to Tex Rickard, promoter, is now unanimous and the New York-er has responded by promising to come here Thursday to settle arrangements for the $200,000 affair at Soldier Field in September.

The city council yesterday expressed their willingness to have the contest decided here.

Although all was smooth sailing here, reports from New York and Philadelphia told of considerable preliminary sparring in court room "rings." Gene Tunney and his manager, Billy Gibson, were sued in New York by Tim Mara, New York sportsman, for 10 per cent of the champion's $200,000 Sequi fight intake and 25 per cent of his subsequent earnings.

Kearns After Dempsey
Jack Kearns, Dempsey's former manager, announced he would continue his effort to collect $600,000 he alleges Dempsey owes him while Dempsey entered a counter claim in Philadelphia for $279,926 from Kearns.

In his counter claim Dempsey avers that he terminated an oral contract with Kearns because he learned his former manager had been convicted of a criminal charge in 1914 in Kings County, Washington, under the name of McKernan.

For Dempsey's fight with Tom Gibbons, Kearns, the affidavit alleges, received $289,500, but kept it all in addition to $15,000 made in admissions to exhibitions at Great Falls, Mont., prior to the fight at Shelby and other moneys which they were to have shared equally under the oral agreement.

Dundee Beaten Last Night in Chicago Ring

Chicago, July 26—(AP)—Joey Glick of New York, won the decision over Mike Dundee of Rock Island in ten rounds. Dundee started at a fast pace, but seemed to tire after the fourth and Glick kept his left jab in Dundee's face constantly. Glick weighed 130 and Dundee 129½.

CUBS BACK HOME ON TOP, THANKS TO N. Y. GIANTS

McGraw's Men Top-ple Pirates from Lead in Hot Battle

(BY THE AP)

The National League's humpty dumpty race showed the Cubs back on top again today after staying away from the ball field yesterday. Reese, third baseman of the Giants, contributed to a dual cause by spanking a home-run in the seventh against the Pirates. The homer was the only run of the game and it topped Pittsburgh from the lead. The contest was a hurling battle between Kremer and Benton.

The rush of Cincinnati carried the team further toward the top of the second division. The Reds beat St. Louis twice, 3-2 in 10 innings and 4-3. The double killing widened the breach between St. Louis and the two leaders.

The Detroit-Philadelphia game furnished the lion's share of the American League excitement. Dykes knocked out a homer in the 13th to give the Mackmen a 6 to 5 victory.

Cleveland and the Boston Red Sox engaged in a free scoring game, the Red Sox winning 10-7.

experts say, “is an almost perfect seal for tobacco

REMEMBER how the soft foil cigarette package replaced the pasteboard box! Well, here's the same idea applied to pipe tobacco:

A heavy foil pouch,
sealed in an extra
wrapper of glassine

Experts say it is more “air-tight” than the ordinary pocket tin . . . it keeps Granger in perfect condition . . . fresh and full-flavored indefinitely! Another thing:

Foil costs less than a tin
hence Granger's
